Age-old wisdom, modern technology

Throughout human history, co-sleeping: mothers sleeping alongside their infants, has been an accepted system connecting the health and wellbeing of both mothers and infants. By sleeping next to its mother, the infant receives protection, warmth, emotional reassurance, and breast milk - in just the forms and quantities that nature intended. Co-sleeping enables mothers (and fathers) to respond quickly to the infant, feel more relaxed and get a good night's sleep. Although co-sleeping is normative in many cultures, fear of harming the baby or "overlying" during sleep has come to discourage it in many western countries.

In fact, psychological studies suggest that children who have "co-slept" in a loving and safe environment become better adjusted adults than those who were encouraged to sleep without parental contact or reassurance. Studies of mother and infants sleeping together continually emphasize the strong connection between the physiological and social aspects of the mother-infant relationship.

With Co-Zee, you can enjoy the benefits of co-sleeping, without the stress!

So you can sleep while your baby sleeps.
